STATUS OF NORTH VIETNAM

SAM SITES

This report was prepared in response to CIA requirement C-CI6-83,261, which requested a study of North Vietnam SAM Sites to determine what material is used in their construction, their accessibility, permanency, and current status.

From a detailed study of available photography of all SAM Sites in North Vietnam, it is concluded that all revetments, and the base of the revetment where the launcher is to be positioned, are of earthen construction. Many of the revetments analyzed have been constructed by scraping up earth in the immediate area of the site to form the walls, as is observed at Hanoi SAM Site B21-2 in its construction sequence between [REDACTED] (Figure 1).

As far as permanency is concerned, NPIC considers SA-2 SAM sites with revetted positions to be permanent sites, whereas sites not revetted are considered to be of a temporary nature. Therefore, the sites in North Vietnam are considered to be permanent and will be carried as such until they have been returned to cultivation or other normal state. It should be noted, however, that the SA-2 SAM system utilizes mobile equipment which past experience has shown does not always require revetting.

The information contained in this report has been gathered from various missions through [REDACTED] but not all sites were covered that recently and the information does not represent a conclusive statement as to the presence of missile-associated equipment on that date. All of the completed sites in North Vietnam are capable of being occupied, and the roads to all the sites are considered to be adequate for the transportation of SA-2 equipment.

Table 1 lists the 64 sites identified through [REDACTED] and summarizes available information on each site.
